

Example H

The examples $\mathrm{F}, \mathrm{G}, \mathrm{H}$ are transformations which, in contrast to the readable examples, give the alphabet an exclusively graphical quality. Beneath those exaggerations lie the shapes of A to $Z$. Straight lines do not turn into curved lines and vice versa. By interaction of text and graphics, writing can be consequently different.
A. G.

